

OH MY GODDESS!

We applied with this concept last year, but it wasn't accepted. We would really love to create it though, so we take a chance and send it again :)

Oh my Goddess is a homage to the goddess of cacao. The concept is based on the love of chocolate, the cacao ceremony ritual and our connection to the earth and the universe. We are at one with all things on this planet, and plants like the Theobroma Cacao can enhance that experience, for example when we drink it in ceremony. The goddess mouth is half open, for drinking cacao or eat some chocolate or maybe to say something.

The cacao tree is a mysterious being with its magical fruits that brings so many of us humans so much pleasure. The process of making edible food from these fruits is long and special, and it is interesting to contemplate how it was once invented. For example, someone in the place we today, thousands of years later know as Guatemala, realised that these fruits had to fertilise underground to get really delicious.

Today, many people participate in cacao ceremonies and it is a great thing. Where we were born, many of the old traditions are gone and replaced by consumerism. Oh my Goddess want to celebrate this reconnection with the old way of hanging out with each other.

The inside of the face will be cut out to look like raw cacao beans in the same manner as they appear inside the raw cacao fruit.

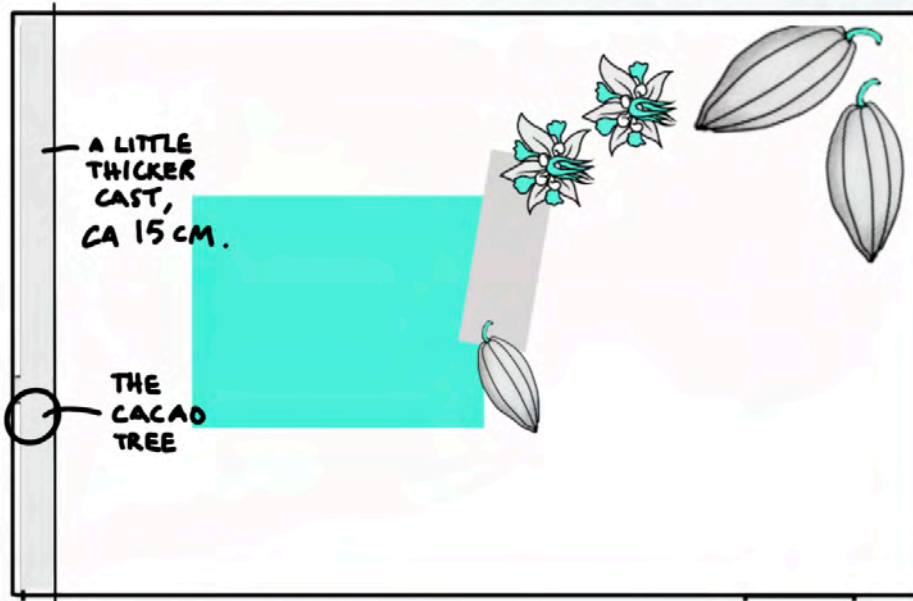

The dark side of the concept is of course how cacao farmers, and even the cacao culture, have been colonised, used and abused during history. Nowadays we can all be conscious when buying cacao products. And in that way support a world in which humans treat both each other and the earth with respect and love.

The goddess real name is Ko-kow.

LIGHTING thoughts:

Individual light in the fruits in the tree.

The pistils in the flowers and the stem of the fruits. The female flower is white and the male flower is pink.
